Summary of Questions and Responses

Several common themes emerged from your feedback. We have summarised these below and hope the information addresses your questions.

- Our PSHE curriculum, including the updates for September 2026, is available on the school website. Knowledge organisers are also available and provide a clear overview of the key learning and topics covered each term. Each knowledge organiser includes key vocabulary and questions you might like to ask your child at home.
- We have updated our curriculum to align with the Department for Education (DfE) PSHE and Relationships and Health Education (RHE) guidance for 2026. As part of this review, some topics have been refreshed to reflect current priorities and real-world contexts, including areas such as water safety and railway safety.
- As outlined in our policy, sex education is not taught at Roecroft. When pupils begin learning about aspects of early puberty in Key Stage 2, additional information is shared with parents and carers so that discussions can be supported at home. We regularly review the content of this unit and make adjustments, where appropriate, to meet the needs and maturity of each cohort.
- Some families asked how LGBT+ relationships and families are covered within the curriculum. A document titled "What do we teach about LGBT+ relationships?" is available on our website and provides specific examples of where this learning is included. All content is taught in an age-appropriate way. The document can be found by visiting the Curriculum section of the website, selecting Foundation Subjects, and then PSHE:

- While curriculum information is already available on our website, we recognise that families lead busy lives. As termly curriculum documents are produced for all subjects, sending each one individually would generate a large volume of emails. Instead, we will send a reminder at the start of each term with a link to the relevant curriculum information on our website.
